ABOUT GLYNDEBOURNE

Glyndebourne, situated in the beautiful landscape of East Sussex, England, is internationally recognized as one of the world's leading opera houses. Its reputation stems from a passion for artistic excellence encapsulated in founder John Christie's insistence on doing "not the best we can do but the best that can be done anywhere."

John and his opera singer wife, Audrey Mildmay, founded the Glyndebourne Festival in 1934, sharing a conviction that opera was life-enhancing, vibrant and relevant – especially when executed to the highest standards with exceptional attention to detail. It was a vision that catapulted them far beyond the borders of East Sussex, onto the world stage.

Glyndebourne is as forward-thinking now as it was then – pushing the boundaries of opera, telling stories in ways that are vital to audiences, and creating world-class opera experiences that have the potential to transform lives. The Festival runs from May to August with a program of six operas, but Glyndebourne also produces family open days, art and archive exhibitions, member events, and an Autumn season of opera and concerts that puts rising stars center stage.

As a registered charity, Glyndebourne is funded by box office income and by the generosity of its Members and supporters. Glyndebourne has pioneered in reaching new opera audiences, through touring, recordings and streaming, as well as offering subsidized ticket prices for schools, families, Under-30s and Under-40s.

GLYNDEBOURNE AND AMERICA — A LONG AND PRODUCTIVE PARTNERSHIP

From the earliest years of the Glyndebourne Festival in the 1930s to the present day, Glyndebourne has fostered a closely collaborative relationship with the United States. Some key milestones in this relationship include:

2022 Glyndebourne's acclaimed new commission of Brett Dean's Hamlet, with a libretto by Matthew Jocelyn, had its American premiere at the Metropolitan Opera and garnered rave reviews.

2014 A GAA grant enabled Glyndebourne to bring its celebrated Festival production of Britten's Billy Budd to the Brooklyn Academy of Music for a week of sold-out performances. The production made its highly-praised West Coast premiere in 2019 at San Francisco Opera.

2001 Glyndebourne presented its production of Janáček's The Makropulos Case at the Brooklyn Academy of Music in New York, with the support of GAA.

1971 Glyndebourne Association America Inc. is launched to broaden the base of support and strengthen the partnership with Glyndebourne in the United States.

1956 Glyndebourne releases in theatres On Such a Night, a captivating 37-minute film that tells the tale of an American tourist who discovers Glyndebourne while searching for the elusive 'Countess.'

Glyndebourne regularly works with major opera houses in the United States to present its productions. They have been seen in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Seattle and Houston.

Numerous leading American artists have made their U.K. debuts at Glyndebourne including: Renée Fleming (1992), Nathan Gunn (2000), Lorraine Hunt Lieberson (1996), Sylvia McNair (1989), Danielle de Niese (2005), Elizabeth DeShong (2008), Michael Fabiano (2014), Lisette Oropesa (2017), Evan Rogister (2023), Joëlle Harvey (2012) and Brandon Cedel (2014).

Glyndebourne strives to create transformative experiences for its audiences by identifying artistic collaborators with a shared vision of excellence.

Each season, top established and emerging creative teams and performers are given the luxury of abundant rehearsal time to develop and rehearse productions that are acclaimed throughout the world for their excellence and imagination. To freely pursue its artistic objectives, the Festival accepts no public funding and relies entirely on private support to ensure its artistic independence. Committed to bringing Glyndebourne to the broadest audience possible, it has invested heavily in both digital and live HD performances. In order to develop the next generation of opera lovers, Glyndebourne's award-winning Learning & Engagement department has a year-round program of activities for young people and adults working to create extraordinary artistic experiences, sparking a lifelong interest in opera and finding and supporting the talented artists of the future. Glyndebourne constantly invests in the artistic and audience experience to create a stimulating and inspirational environment for both artists and audiences.
